

Computer Science

✧ www.acm.org

ASSOCIATION FOR COMPUTING MACHINERY – organization oriented to advancing students and professionals in the information technology field. The web site contains a Career Resource Center where upon registration job positions may be posted, either online or online and print advertisements in their journal. There also is access to several other publications and information on advertising in them. And they have a Committee on Women in Computer Science web page that has some interesting resources on it.

✧ www.npaci.edu/Outreach/CDC/index.html

 THE COALITION FOR DIVERSIFYING COMPUTING - group organized to promote the participation of minorities in computer related fields. They are affiliated with several computer societies. The website includes Resource with links to many minority related career websites and several subscription based databases of interested Universities, minorities and minority graduate students.

✧ www.cra.org

COMPUTING RESEARCH ASSOCIATION – membership society for academic, industry and government professionals interested in computer science, research and related fields. The website offers a Jobs page where positions may be posted; there is also a listserv that goes out to subscribers when new postings are added. The society also has a newsletter and advertising is available though that format. And, the organization also has a  Committee on the Status of Women in Computing Research, www.cra.org/Activities/craw.crew/ which provides information and resources about women in the field, and they provide a link to the Coalition to Diversify Computing, an organization interested in increasing the participation of minorities in computer fields.

✧ www.computer.org

COMPUTER SOCIETY – one of the largest members of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineering (IEEE) promoting computing professionals. This website has a Career Services Center in conjunction with the IEEE job site where job positions can be posted, resume databases pursued along with other resources. There is also advertising information on the website for the many journals and newsletters affiliated with the society.

