 n dsu apartment newsletter

As many of you have probably heard, on February 20th, 2012, four of NDSU's freshman, Danielle Renninger, Lauren Peterson, Megan Sample, and Jordan Playle, passed away in a weather related traffic accident on I-94. There has been overwhelming support on the NDSU campus for friends and family of these four young Bison. For those of you that would like to do more, there is a Facebook group selling tshirts in memory of the girls for $15 (or $20 if you would like it shipped to you). The proceeds of these shirts will go towards the families of these four beautiful Bison angels. Shirts will arrive by March 16th. Please go to the Facebook group "M.S. J.P. D.R. L.P. Memory Shirts" to place your order and for payment information. Additional donations for the families are also being accepted at this site. Other Facebook groups such as "Remembering M.S J.P D.R L.P" are areas for everyone to express encouraging words and memories about these beautiful ladies. No matter how you choose to embrace their legacy, Danielle Renninger, Lauren Peterson, Jordan Playle and Megan Sample are memories never to be forgotten. RIP.

Say "Cheese!!"

Kayley's Korner

Every day people do amazing things that they think go unnoticed, but today a few individuals will be recognized for their good deeds. These are anonymous accounts of selfless things people have done around campus.

A few days ago there was a young lady that had waited in line to get coffee in the union for at least 15 minutes, but to her avail she would not be able to taste that coffee she waited so long for. Not a minute after she had paid for and received her coffee was it knocked right out of her hand by a passer-by. However, little did she know that her knight in shining armor was standing right behind her in line. He quickly came to her rescue and helped her pick up the mess and having heard her coffee order while standing in line behind her, he ordered her a new coffee along with his own....I know what you are thinking; I hope they get married!

A professor was making his way towards class with an arm full of freshly graded papers and was in such a rush that he failed to see the step off the curb. He tripped and managed to drop half of his papers in a puddle in the middle of the street. Almost every student on their way to class passed right by him, except for one person. A girl in a blue hoodie took a few minutes of her time to help him pick up the soggy papers. Though it seemed a small thing to her, it probably meant a great deal to that professor who was clearly having a bad day.

Those of you who ride the bus every day know how cramped and disheveled the ride can be. If you aren't able to get on the bus right away that means you have to stand, which also means you will end up with a face full of backpack from the person in front of you. For those of us who are vertically challenged it can be even more of rollercoaster. Not being able to reach the bar above you equals using someone around you as support when the bus driver stops a little too quickly. Seeing a girl struggling to stay off the floor, a man kindly got out of his seat and offered it to her. It is said that a kind act causes a chain reaction. Two other guys then offered their seats to two other gals in similar situations. Chivalry just might not be dead.

I hope this encourages you to either make a person's day better or recognize someone who has done a small thing that makes a big difference. Thank you to everyone out there who already has!
