

NDSU History Department Colloquium

The Department of History, Philosophy, & Religious Studies announces its March colloquium, which will feature PhD student Jessica Clark recounting her research on the oral history of the Germans from Russia. Specifically, her topic is,

"Hope for Tomorrow: Holiday Traditions Shape German-Russian Identity"

Time: 3:00 pm Friday, March 28

Place: Morrill Hall 107

Colleagues, the public, students, and especially History graduate students cordially invited! Coffee, cookies, and good conversation in a collegial setting.

The colloquium will be webcast and archived using Wimba, the web-based instructional program of the North Dakota University system. It will be available for viewing and listening, live or via the Wimba archives, by anyone with a reasonably fast Internet connection; no software required. Go here for more information on Wimba access: www.ndsu.edu/instruct/isern

For further information about the History Department Colloquium, contact: Dr. Dennis Cooley, 701-231-7038, Dennis.Cooley@ndsu.edu

NDSU History Department Colloquium