

Speed DATING

For graphic design work groups

Maybe you don't know some people in this class. Well, here's your chance to meet everyone, and do it quickly. Using the speed dating concept popular among singles in urban areas, you'll have the chance to get acquainted with potential workmates by asking brief, specific questions. How does it work?

1. You must meet everyone in the room; keep track using your index card.
2. You have three minutes to get acquainted. Be sure to get everyone's name. I will keep track of time and ring a bell when you need to move on. Move quickly!
3. Based on these short meetings, choose three people you'd prefer to work with, and two people who, well, might not be a super-perfect fit for you.
4. Based on your choices, I will assign work teams. No, I can't guarantee you'll get your first choices, but I'll try my best to match you, and to avoid putting you with your less-than-ideal choices.

Fill out the form below after you've met everyone in class.

Your name:

With whom would you most like to work, and why? Must provide three names.

Name:

Why:

Name:

Why:

Name:

Why:

With whom would you not want to work, and why? Must fill in both. Designers must learn to be discerning! "I like to work with everyone" won't fly.

Name:

Why:

Name:

Why: