The Campus Community

Resistance begins with people confronting pain, whether it's theirs or somebody else's, and wanting to do something to change it.¹

----bell hooks, Yearning

One of the primary missions of higher education institutions is discovering and disseminating knowledge. Academic communities expend a great deal of effort fostering an environment where this mission is nurtured, with the understanding that institutional climate has a profound effect on the academic community's ability to excel in research and scholarship.² The climate on college campuses not only affects the creation of knowledge, but also has a significant impact on members of the academic community who, in turn, contribute to the creation of the campus environment.³ The necessity for creating a more inclusive, welcoming climate on college campuses is supported by several national education association reports.

A 1990 report by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and the American Council on Education⁴ suggests that, in order to build a vital community of learning, a college or university must provide an environment where,

... intellectual life is central and where faculty and students work together to strengthen teaching and learning, where freedom of expression is uncompromisingly protected and where civility is powerfully affirmed, where the dignity of all individuals is affirmed and where equality of opportunity is vigorously pursued, and where the well being of each member is sensitively supported.

In addition, the Association of American Colleges and Universities (1995) challenge higher education institutions "to affirm and enact a commitment to equality, fairness, and inclusion." AAC&U proposes that colleges and universities commit to "the task of creating inclusive educational environments in which all participants are equally welcome, equally valued, and equally heard.” The report suggests that in order to provide a framework within which a vital community of learning can be built, a primary mission of the academy must be to create an environment that ideally cultivates diversity and celebrates difference.

Colleges and universities, therefore, seek to create an environment characterized by equal access for all students, faculty and staff regardless of socially constructed identity differences (e.g. race, disability, gender, sexual orientation, spirituality, etc.), a climate where individuals are not just tolerated but valued. Institutional mission statements and strategic plans suggest that it is crucial to increase multicultural awareness and understanding within an environment of mutual respect and cooperation and to foster a climate that is nurtured by dialogue and evidenced by a pattern of civil interaction.⁵

North Dakota State University (NDSU) believes in creating such an environment⁶. In an effort to achieve this environment, NDSU determined that the first step was to assess the current campus climate in order to identify important issues and then to create ways for individuals, departments and the university to address them.

In the fall semester 2002, the Diversity Council⁷ at NDSU contracted with an outside consultant⁸ to assist them in identifying challenges confronting the University community with respect to

⁶ NDSU Definition of diversity states that diversity encompasses the many different aspects that comprise our identity and contribute to our value and creativity as people. For the purposes of its work, the NDSU Diversity Council will focus primarily on those dimensions of diversity that have significant impact on individuals and groups in society: age, ethnicity, gender, mental and physical abilities, race, religion, and sexual orientation.

With regard to curricular issues and educational programming, “social justice” is the term used to operationalize the discussion of the issues and concerns facing the groups identified in the diversity definition.

⁷ The Diversity Council consists of faculty members, administrators, staff members, and students who are committed to diversity and pluralism grounded in visions of justice and a belief in the transforming power of education. Our commitment acknowledges a history of prejudice, discrimination, and exclusion in our society. We recognize that institutional and social changes necessitate intentional efforts to include all voices. We strive to provide a climate where there is an open and free exchange of ideas rooted in civility and a respect for the contributions of all those in our community. underrepresented⁹ groups through an internal assessment. The assessment was a proactive initiative by the Diversity Council to review the climate on campus to address concerns regarding underrepresented groups. The internal assessment was conducted, and the results were used to identify specific strategies for addressing the challenges and supporting positive diversity initiatives through the Strategic Plan for Diversity, Equity, and Community: 2005 – 2010. This document provides an overview of the process used in creating the strategic plan, a grid specifying the proposed action steps and related details, a matrix identifying the action steps associated with responsible campus units, and a description of the plan for accountability and assessment using plan review teams with a five-year timetable.

Process Review

Because of the inherent complexity of the topic of diversity, it is crucial to examine the multiple dimensions of diversity in higher education. The conceptual model used as the foundation for the assessment of campus climate was developed by Smith (1999) and modified by Rankin (2002).¹⁰ Following the design of the model, initial focus groups representing the various constituent groups on campus were conducted in November 2002. The focus groups were used to identify challenges confronting the NDSU community. The information gathered from the focus groups was then used to advise the construction of the survey instrument. The participant groups were recommended by the consultant and revised by the Diversity Council. The focus group protocol was developed by the consultant and approved by the Diversity Council. Graduate students enrolled in Dr. Ann Burnett's Advanced Qualitative Methods in Communication class conducted the focus groups. The consultant traveled to NDSU and conducted a one-day workshop on focus groups/interviews with the graduate students and also discussed the overall project with administrators and the Diversity Council.

The survey questions were constructed using the work of Rankin, 2003,¹¹ as well as the input from the initial focus groups. The Diversity Council reviewed the drafts of the survey. The survey was designed to have respondents provide information about their personal campus experiences, their perception of the campus climate, and their perceptions of institutional actions including administrative policies and academic initiatives regarding diversity issues and concerns on campus. The final survey contained fifty-three questions and an additional space for respondents to provide narrative comments about their experiences. The survey was modified into a web-based format, and in March-April 2003, the entire population of NDSU students, faculty, and staff was invited and encouraged to participate. The on-line survey included information describing the purpose of the study, explaining the survey instrument, and assuring the respondents of anonymity. All surveys results were recorded in a secure site database and tabulated for appropriate analysis.

A summary of the findings suggests that while NDSU has several challenges in regards to diversity issues; these challenges are not unique.¹² Members of the Diversity Council shared the findings with the NDSU community through a series of presentations to various campus constituent groups during the fall semester 2003. Participants in the meetings were asked to share their concerns and encouraged to recommend actions to address the challenges with either the facilitators or directly with the consultant. From the findings of the internal assessments and feedback from the Diversity Council members, and other constituent group members, the Strategic Plan for Diversity, Equity, and Community: 2005 –2010 was created. The Diversity Council was instrumental in creating the plan and provided feedback on the initial drafts of the plan. The final Strategic Plan for Diversity, Equity, and Community: 2005 –2010, presented in grid form on pages 7-28, includes actions organized around the following five components of campus climate and their related objectives:

1. Institutional Commitment

Create an environment where everyone feels welcome, respected, and safe.

2. Learning and Pedagogy

Develop a learning environment that guides students, faculty and staff to think critically about social justice issues in the classroom and workplace and provides everyone with the tools to think inclusively.

3. Research and Creative Activity

Engage in research and creative activity that reflect multicultural values and perspectives.

¹² The full report of the campus climate assessment is available in the NDSU Office for Equity and Diversity or at <http://www.ndsu.nodak.edu/diversity/>; click Documents tab.

4. Recruitment & Retention of Historically Underrepresented Students, Faculty & Staff
Increase the representation of historically underrepresented populations among faculty, staff, students and administrators.
5. Inter-group & Intra-group Relations
Celebrate human differences and recognize socially constructed differences (e.g., gender, race, etc.) through encouraging and supporting the continuing interaction of diverse cultures.

For each proposed action in the plan, the grid also provides the following:

- Suggested administrative oversight for each action
Each action item has attached to it suggested office(s)/person(s) that are responsible for initiating and providing oversight of the action.
- Resources and/or source of resources for each action
These include cost estimates, both fiscal resources and human resources for implementation of each action.
- Outcomes implied for each action successfully completed
Each action is followed by a potential outcome, suggesting that if the action is successfully completed that the stated outcome will be achieved.
- Actions relation to information attained in the assessment
This section notes how the actions relate to specific challenges identified in the assessment.
- Progress to date
An action item is marked in this column with an asterisk (*) if the action is proposed for implementation or with a check mark (✓) if the action is currently supported by NDSU.
- Timeline
The timeframe indicates where in the five-year plan the action should be completed.

Plan Review Teams, Accountability, and a Five-Year Timetable

The accountability portion of the Strategic Plan for Diversity, Equity, and Community 2005-2010 is based on three components:

- 1) Incorporation of actions and efforts by each unit/department into existing annual reporting processes used by the President and each Vice President.

Where those reporting processes do not currently have a component addressing diversity efforts, the President and Vice President are asked to incorporate adapt their report format so that these efforts can be easily identified and compiled.

- 2) Creation of plan review teams* through appointment by the University President.

The purpose of the teams will be to

- review annually by unit the efforts and accomplishments related to the Strategic Plan for Diversity, Equity, and Community 2005-2010;
- compile efforts and accomplishments by presidential or vice presidential units and provide feedback to the president, each vice president, and major unit administrators reporting to that vice president about those efforts and accomplishments; and

- 3) Publication annually of notable efforts and accomplishments as best practices through media like It's Happening at State, the Diversity Council's web site and the President's annual report.

* Plan Review Teams

- Plan review team members will be appointed by the President. Recommendations for appointment will be encouraged from campus constituents and gathered by the Diversity Council; the President's Cabinet, the President's Council, and Diversity Council members themselves will be especially encouraged to make recommendations. Those appointed to the plan review teams will need to have a demonstrated commitment to diversity and institutional change (for example, have participated in anti-racism training or other similar training) and strong, effective communication skills – both in listening and in articulating. In addition, appointments for the plan review teams will take into consideration the importance of including individuals from traditionally underrepresented groups while respecting the fact that this could lead to unfair and burdensome expectations for individuals.
- Each plan review team will have a leader/facilitator who is a Diversity Council member. To the degree possible, the leader/facilitator's position will be relevant to the vice president's area that his/her team would review.
- Plan review teams will have training annually.
