Faculty Workload<sup>13</sup>

Fall 2022

Faculty workload consists of teaching, advising, research, service, mentoring, and Extension. We acknowledge that documenting workload in each area is worthwhile but this year we highlight advising workload as we transition to a new advising model with professional advisors.

Advisee Workload

Data is for faculty with tenure/tenure-track status who were actively advising students Fall 2022. Among all tenure/tenure-track faculty, 278 were advisors to undergraduate students, 336 were advisors to graduate students, and 19 were advisors for professional students.

Faculty Reports, Data & Transparency

The information provided in this report is a snapshot of faculty data available. The Faculty Affairs office works with the Office of Institutional Research and Analysis to prepare, disseminate, report, and utilize data to further transparency and inform leadership on recommendations for best practices and actionable items for a supportive and inclusive environment for faculty success. For more detailed information on faculty data, please see additional full reports available on campus through these offices.

Data reported are for faculty as of November 2022, fiscal year 2022 (July 1, 2021 - June 30, 2022), academic year 2021-2022, or from the fall 2021 Campus Climate Survey as noted throughout. This is the first annual faculty affairs snapshot. Previous years data can be found on the NDSU Office of Institutional Research and Analysis website.
