Causes for Celebration
(For April 2014)

Recent Teacher Education master’s degree graduate David Schultz received confirmation that his research on flipping his classroom was accepted for publication in the Journal of Chemical Education. The title of the article is “Effects of the Flipped Classroom Model on Student Performance for Advanced Placement High School Chemistry Students.” Co-authors are Stacy Duffield, Associate Professor, School of Education, Seth Rasmussen (Chemistry Department), and Justin Wageman, Associate Professor, School of Education. David is an AP Chemistry teacher at Davies High School in Fargo.

Sherri Stastny, Associate Professor, Health, Nutrition, and Exercise Sciences, and her colleagues, Arldith Brunt, Associate Professor, Health, Nutrition, and Exercise Sciences, Julie Garden-Robinson, Extension Specialist and Professor, Health, Nutrition, and Exercise Science and Max Johnson of Retina Consultants have had the following paper accepted for conference presentation:

The Student North Dakota Education Association (SNDEA) teamed up with the NDSU Tau Sigma Delta Honor Society (College of Architecture) to build and fill Little Free Libraries. SNDEA conducted a book drive and collected close to 500 new and gently used books, and the Honor Society built the little libraries. Ten new libraries were built and filled with books and will be placed throughout the Fargo-Moorhead area. Jeanette Hoffman, Assistant Professor, School of Education, serves as the organization’s advisor. You can find out more information about the Little Free Library movement by visiting littlefreelibrary.org

Approximately 150 pre-service teachers, faculty and invited guests attended the 2014 North Dakota Association for Colleges of Teacher Education (NDACTE) Pre-Service Teacher Conference on the NDSU campus April 4. This year’s event focused on the implementation of the Common Core State Standards in North Dakota with featured keynote speaker Mari Fridgen, Assistant Director ND Education Standards and Practices Board. The NDACTE conference provides professional development for pre-service teachers and features presentations by groups of teacher education students from programs around the state.

The 13th Annual FABO (Fashion Apparel and Business Organization) Fashion Show took place on April 23rd. Original student designs and garments from local retailers were shown on the runway. 13 student designers completed 36 garments for the fashion show. The ARMD Showcase of Student Projects also took place at the same time. 120 high school students from North Dakota and Minnesota attended the fashion show and showcase.
Kwangsoo Park, Assistant Professor, Apparel, Design, and Hospitality Management, and Brent Hill, Assistant Professor, School of Education, coauthored a paper titled “The impact of smoke-free policies on casino gambling revenues”. The paper was presented at the Annual Korea America Hospitality & Tourism Educators Conference, April 25-26, 2014 in Las Vegas, Nevada and the paper was selected to be a best paper by the conference committee.

Nineteen undergraduate physical education teacher candidates recently attended the WHPE Future Professional Workshop held April 25th--26th at the University of Wisconsin River Falls. The workshop featured sessions on Project Adventure, assessment, technology, dance, and various other physical activities for the physical education classroom. Additionally, students had the opportunity to speak with Dr. Jacqueline Lund, co-author of their curriculum course textbook titled Standards-based Physical Education Curriculum Development. The trip was supervised by Ronald Buck, graduate student in the Leadership in Physical Education and Sport M.S. Program and Jenny Linker, Assistant Professor in Health Nutrition, and Exercise Sciences.

NDSU was well represented at the Northland Chapter ACSM meeting on Friday March 28th. Twenty-two undergraduate students from the exercise science program, two graduate students (Nick Redenius, Sarah Greterman), as well as three faculty (Bryan Christensen, Kyle Hackney, Donna Terbizan) were present to learn about New Perspectives in Performance Nutrition. Our Athletic training faculty (Kara Gange, Nikki German, Shannon David) were there to promote the Athletic Training Master's programs, and participated with Bryan Christensen in a round table that discussed graduate programs within the Chapter. Also in attendance were a number of NDSU Wellness PhD graduates – Jim White (Bemidji), Anita Gust (Concordia), Scott Staiger (Dakota State), and Chuck Fountaine (University of Minnesota-Duluth).

ARMD students Aspen Marleau and Holland Lind each won prizes for their designs in the annual Passion for Green Fashion contest sponsored by West Acres Mall. Aspen's design won a People's Choice award and a $1000 mall gift card. Holland won Third place Judge's Choice and a $200 mall gift card.

Jane Vangsness Frisch, a Ph.D. student in the Institutional Analysis area of the Education Doctoral Programs, has been named the Associate Vice President for Student Success, Institutional Effectiveness and Career Services at North Dakota State College of Science. Jane's areas of experience include eight years of progressive and diverse work experience within higher education including areas of student success, student affairs, career services, student life and conduct, alcohol and other drug prevention, assessment, budget and legislative processes.

Margaret Fitzgerald, Professor, Human Development and Family Science and Unit Head, Health, Nutrition, and Exercise Sciences, and Glenn Muske from the NDSU Extension Center for Rural Vitality, along with colleges from the NC 1030 Regional Research Project on Family Firms and Policy in Times of Disruption, were invited to present a session on “Family-owned Businesses: The Family as a Producer and Consumer” at the American Council on Consumer Interests annual conference in April. Their paper was titled “A longitudinal study of copreneurial couples: Factors contributing to continuance over a decade.”
Kelly Sassi, Assistant Professor of English and Education, presented at the conference, "Forward ACTion! Building the Education Pipeline" on April 16, 2014 in Mandan, North Dakota. The title of her presentation was "Writing on Demand for the New Common Core Assessments." Sassi is the new director of the Red River Valley Writing Project.

Jim Deal, Professor and Unit Head, Human Development and Family Science, received word of his accepted article:

Brent Hill and Chris Ray, Assistant Professors, School of Education, presented a paper titled “A Misunderstanding and Misuse of Parallel Analysis” at the annual meeting for the American Educational Research Association in Philadelphia, April 3-7. The paper focused upon a common misconception regarding the theoretical rationale behind parallel analysis and its subsequent misapplication. A Monte Carlo simulation was conducted in order to better understand the appropriate uses of the procedure when testing dimensionality in exploratory factor analysis.

Three master’s level students in counselor education (Tracy Hansen, Anna Chock, and Megan Arvig) received full scholarships to attend a 4-day training institute in June, 2014 at the Jean Baker Miller Institute at the Wellesley College Centers for Women, Wellesley Massachusetts. The training and leadership focuses on Relational Cultural Theory: Skills in research, clinical settings, and the neurobiology of connection.

Ardith Brunt, Associate Professor in Dietetics, had the following publication with graduate students, some past some current.

The following faculty received awards at the Fifth Annual Green and Gold Globe Diversity Awards Program sponsored by Equity, Diversity and Global Outreach:

- Larry Napoleon, Assistant Professor in the School of Education, received the Faculty Office of Multicultural Program Award
- Dena Wyum, Senior Lecturer in Human Development and Family Science, received the Equity and Diversity Center faculty Award
- Kim Overton and Anita Welch, Assistant Professors in Education, received the Lorraine Murphy NDSU Faculty International Awards.
Great Plains IDEA, a partnership of 20 public university members providing access to the best educational opportunities by collaboratively developing and delivering high-quality, online academic programs, recently held their annual meeting. Great Plains IDEA is an academic alliance that offers fully-online graduate and undergraduate coursework and program options in high demand professional fields. The following NDSU-HDE faculty or faculty groups were recognized with awards for their work:

- Ardith Brunt, Associate Professor in Dietetics, received the "Laudable Faculty Program Coordinator Leadership Award" for stepping up to the leadership role and investing additional time and energy to provide the extra push for the Dietetics program for the past year.
- The Merchandising program received the "Leading the Path toward Assessment Award" by providing a thoughtful and well-designed assessment plan and successfully meeting their target date. Linda Manikowske and Jaeha Lee, Associate Professors; Holly Bastow-Shoop, Professor; and Ann Braaten, Assistant Professor, in Apparel and Textiles, are members of the Merchandising faculty.
- The Family and Consumer Sciences Education program received the "Priming the Pump Award" for identifying a group of students interested in continuing their education with Great Plains IDEA. The faculty worked with the University of Connecticut to create a path for undergraduate students to smoothly transition to the Great Plains IDEA program. Mari Borr, Associate Professor in teacher education, is a member of this faculty.

WooMi Jo Phillips, Assistant Professors, Apparel, Design, and Hospitality Management (ADHM), and Choong-Ki Lee, Professor in the College of Hotel and Tourism at Kyung Hee University in Korea, have a manuscript titled "Behavioral Intentions of International Visitors to the Korean Hanok Guesthouses: Quality, Value and Satisfaction" got accepted for publication in Annals of Tourism Research.