INSTRUCTIONAL DESIGN TEAM SERVICES

If you could increase performance or retention of information in your class, would you want to know how?

When you work with the instructional design team they become your partner in making these things happen. The instructional design team can help you find appropriate technology and methods of teaching to ensure your curriculum is engaging and fully accessible to all students. Working with the instructional design team allows you to find instructional efficiencies you may not have been aware of.

Whether you are a seasoned teacher looking for a few curriculum design tips or a faculty member new to teaching, you can benefit from a consultation with them.

REQUEST A CONSULTATION:

PROCESS

1. Request a consultation
2. An LAIC staff member will contact you to set up a meeting and let you know which team member you will meet with.
3. Prepare by identifying the course(s) or technology you plan to work with. Bring your learning goals and a current syllabus.
4. Your instructional specialist will listen to what you are trying to accomplish, ask questions to gain more information, and offer suggestions regarding your course.
5. Additional meetings may be scheduled as additional needs are identified.

This FREE service is available through a collaboration with NDSU's Learning and Applied Innovation Center (LAIC).
