DR. ALLISON COOK-SATHER

Dr. Cook-Sather is the Mary Katharine Woodworth professor of education at Bryn Mawr College and director of the Teaching and Learning Institute at Bryn Mawr and Haverford Colleges. She has developed internationally recognized programs that position students and teachers as pedagogical partners, published over 100 articles and book chapters and nine books, spoken or consulted on pedagogical partnership work in 13 countries, and served as a visiting scholar at a number of institutions, including University of Cambridge in England. Dr. Cook-Sather is founding editor of Teaching and Learning Together in Higher Education, founding co-editor of International Journal for Students as Partners, reviewer for over 45 journals and book publishers, and the recipient of a number of awards, including the Alumni Excellence in Education Award from the Graduate School of Education at Stanford University.

DR. MEGAN SUMERACKI

Dr. Sumeracki (formerly Smith) earned her Ph.D. in cognitive psychology from Purdue University and is an associate professor at Rhode Island College. Dr. Sumeracki's research focuses on ways established learning strategies from cognitive psychology can be leveraged to improve meaningful learning, and the best ways to promote evidence-based strategy use among students and educators. Dr. Sumeracki has delivered talks and workshops both in the U.S. and abroad at scientific conferences, with educators in primary and secondary schools, institutions of higher education, medical schools, teaching hospitals, and the U.S. State Department. She is a co-founder of The Learning Scientists.
