Electronic Records Day

Information provided by North Dakota’s Information Technology Department

In 2018, Electronic Records Day is celebrated on October 10, 2018. Sponsored by the Council of State Archivists (CoSA), E-Records Day is an opportunity to raise community awareness of our digital records and to enlist help in preserving electronic records. This day is designed to raise awareness among state government agencies, the general public, related professional organizations, and other stakeholders about the crucial role electronic records play in our world.

Electronic records touch all aspects of our lives. The volume and complexity of government electronic records and information continue to increase. We must work together in order for electronic records to remain accessible and continue to provide value in our business processes.

- 1,693% growth in state electronic records across the US since 2006
- 445% growth in electronic records over paper records

Remember, the staff of ITD Records Management and the State Archives are here to help tackle these challenges.
