SPREADING THE WORD

NDSU mechanical engineering student Bryce Haugeberg made his Daytona ARCA 200 debut on Feb. 15, racing a Bison-themed race car at the legendary Daytona International Speedway. To celebrate, NDSU University Relations promoted the event on social media and featured Haugeberg's incredible story on the NDSU home page.

Haugeberg's achievement showcased both his racing talent and the connection between his mechanical engineering studies and motorsports, bringing Bison pride to a national stage.

BISON SPOTLIGHT

Steven “Skip” Anderson, manager of NDSU’s Sheep Unit and animal science instructor in the College of Agriculture, Food Systems, and Natural Resources, is our Bison Spotlight feature this month. Anderson’s commitment to livestock care and hands-on learning provides students with invaluable real-world experience. His passion for the industry extends beyond the classroom, ensuring that both students and the community have opportunities to engage with the Sheep Unit and gain an understanding of animal agriculture.

“Every day, the NDSU Sheep Unit has the opportunity to further the land-grant mission by providing learning opportunities for students, providing sheep for cutting-edge research that improves animal and human health, and offering North Dakota citizens learning opportunities through Extension and outreach. I get to connect NDSU to the people we serve through animal agriculture, and that is pretty cool.”

— Skip Anderson
