

Dear SBARE

Soil Conservation Districts are humble, quiet organizations that provide a depth of service to their communities across the state.

Responsible to the state for ensuring sustainability in natural resources, healthy soils, water, etc, they educate youth on agriculture, support extension with additional technical skills, support agriculture conservation with equipment no till drills, tree planting to name a few), share knowledge with federal state and organizations to ensure fairness and appropriateness by hosting onsite tours and workshops.

Each SCD has a connection to community unique to each locale. Not often known is an SCDs ability to leverage fund and resources to bring together expertise that aides farmers and ranchers. Funds for SCD's is well invested.

Mary Podoll