SPREADING THE WORD

NDSU's Marketing and Communications team has played a key role in recruiting the first cohort of students in the new Honors College by developing engaging marketing materials that capture the abundance mindset, along with the spirit of curiosity and possibility. Through bold designs and student-centered messaging, the MarComm team has helped convey how the Honors College is a place where students think boldly, collaborate generously and lead with purpose. BISON SPOTLIGHT

This month's Bison Spotlight feature is U.S. Air Force veteran Samuel Sveen, an NDSU student working toward a degree in natural resources management. During his four-year Air Force career Sveen was deployed to the United Kingdom and the Middle East, gaining valuable experience in leadership and teamwork. After his active-duty service, he joined the Marine Corps Reserve as an Aircraft Rescue and Firefighting Specialist, continuing his dedication to service. At NDSU, he's found camaraderie through the Bison Student Veterans Club and support from Veterans Educational Training, which have helped him succeed personally and academically. As a Rising Scholars mentor, Sveen now gives back by helping fellow student veterans build confidence and community on campus.

“NDSU is a great choice for veterans looking to start college,” Sveen said. “The university offers excellent resources and support for student veterans. The staff in the veteran's office, many of whom are veterans themselves, are all extremely knowledgeable in the process of transitioning from military to civilian life and are very helpful in explaining all the resources and benefits that are available to student veterans.”

CAMPUS HAPPENINGS

Don't miss your chance to attend Theatre NDSU's production of "Glory," a play by Tracey Power that tells the inspiring true story of a women's hockey team that defied expectations and dominated Canadian ice rinks during the Great Depression. Performances of "Glory" are at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 4–6 and 11–13 in Askanase Auditorium. Visit the Performing Arts website to get your tickets, and check out what other events are scheduled.

Stay up to date with all the exciting happenings at NDSU by checking out the campus events calendars. For university sponsored events, reach out to the Marketing and Communications team to learn more about the resources we have.
